The film was released on 7 February 2009. The film is a remake of his Telugu film, "Englishkaranilla" with Sameera Reddy.

Plot 'Uncle' Jay Shankar (Akshay Kumar) is a retired Army Colonel. The present day is 1990, and Shankar is visiting his daughter Jaya (Katrina Kaif) in Kolkata. Jaya's husband, Deepak Roy (Suniel Shetty), has been shot dead by the Kashmiri militant, Ghulam Rasool. Years before, while serving in the Indian Army, Deepak got romantically involved with Rasool's sister, Shalini (Sameera Reddy). Before Deepak's death, he had convinced his sister to marry him and join the militant group; however, Shalini had refused and chose to return home to the Kashmiri capital, Srinagar. Back in Kolkata, Jaya is a socialite; however, her father has insisted that she return to Kashmir and join his new company, 'Group A'. In the same vein, he has also insisted that she marry him in person, not by proxy. The plan is for her to get married to his best friend, Pankaj Chopra (Pareesh Rawal), before coming back to India. Jaya comes back to India and after some time, Deepak's widow (Pareesh Rawal), comes to visit her. At first, the grieving widow wants to stay at Jaya's house and reside with Jaya as if Deepak was still alive. However, Jaya convinces her to move to her house, while Jaya and Pankaj plan to get married. Jaya's father, Jay Shankar, has arranged a marriage for her with someone from the small town of Phalakwara (Rajasthan). On their wedding day, the groom arrives, but turns out to be Deepak. After the wedding is over, the bridegroom is killed, with his face revealed as that of Deepak. Jaya goes to Kashmir with her father and learns that she is pregnant with Deepak's child. Jaya is horrified to find that she now has to marry the man who killed her husband, and goes on a hunger strike. Pankaj comes to her house in order to take her home, but she is worried about the repercussions of a pregnant woman going back to India, so she asks him to take her to Canada.
